

I want to have the broadest possible number of participants in media. That means having more owners, and that each of those owners allow more people to speak. Package deals and bundled services deny consumers the ability to voice their preferences about which products are really best.

Please ease an individual's entry into mass media-- not those who already have control of information over a large segment of the population.

ps. I do not like ClearChannel, and to my uneducated eye it looks like they have a vertical monopoly.
